Customer document repository

Use Techstreet’s document repository to upload or link to standards-related documents and share them with your users.

Features

- Create document records that act just like other standards
- Associate multiple files and links with one document
- Track usage in usage reporting module
- Users must have access to all documents
- Connect your documents to standards in your subscription
- Use historical versions feature to track archival versions of documents

About the customer document repository

The Techstreet Enterprise™ document repository gives you the ability to upload internal standards, gap analyses, and other standards-related documents directly into your subscription. From there, your users will be able to access this content, add it to lists, browse it and more.
Finding uploaded documents
Once you’ve added a document, it’s easy for users to discover it in your Techstreet Enterprise subscription. First, much of the metadata you enter gets indexed by our search engine, so it’s easy to find your documents doing a search. In addition, document titles get added to our typeahead tool. So as your users start to type the title of a document you have added, our search engine typeahead tool will suggest the title to the user.

Users can also use the browse tool to find documents you have added to your Techstreet Enterprise subscription. Document repository is listed along with other publishers available in your browse tree. Clicking on document repository will load a list of all the documents you have added, and users can refine results using Tags if you have chosen to employ them.
